1. What were three great things about the Alpha show, Cinderella?

2. What was something that you didn't like or thought could be better?

3. Why did Prince Charming not want to dance? How did the Fairy get the Prince to feel more confident about dancing? Do you think this could work for you if there is something you want to do but don't feel confident?

4. Do you know anyone or have you ever behaved in a selfish way like the Ugly Stepsisters? Do you get what you want from life when you act like this? What happens instead?

5. Cinderella was very kind, but sometimes she felt 'not good enough'. How did we help her feel better? Would that work for you too? Did you feel good during the show? How? What is something that you dream about, that you now want to make sure happens in your life one day? What will it look, sound and feel like when you get it?

6. Why was the Evil Stepmother so crazy & mean? What did she want more than anything in the world? Do you think she would've been happy if she had got all the money she wanted?

7. The show subtly taught that having fun and yelling out and using your physiology (body) in ways that create what we call a 'peak state' is a great way to live life. So what other area of your life do you think you could apply this technique to? Perhaps an area where you sometimes become stressed or frustrated.

8. How much more fun and more fulfilled and happy would your life and this situation be if you were to use your body, voice, the focus of your mind, and the questions you ask in similar ways like you did during the show? What difference would it make to your life now and in the future?

9. What would that look, sound and feel like?

10. Who was the character that you are the most similar to, or someone who you look up to? Why do you want to be like that character? If you were just like them, do you think you would get what you want in life? Why?

1. What were three great things about the Alpha show, Cinderella, and why?

2. What was something that you didn't like or thought could be better?

3. Remembering the story, what was the most important thing you learnt from the way the characters behaved?

4. What were some of the ideas and strategies that the show taught? You can use these in your own life when you're unsure of how to do something new or feel like you're not getting what you want. List some new things, like new decisions and choices you want to make, about how to behave and treat people, to ensure you get what you want in life.

5. Cinderella was very kind, but sometimes she felt 'not good enough'. How did we help her feel better? Would that work for you too? Did you feel good during the show? How? Cinderella and Prince Charming had a dream to be more than they were, and to make life more than just about themselves. What is something that you dream about, that you now want to make sure happens in your life one day? What will it look, sound and feel like when you get it?

6. Why was the Evil Stepmother so crazy and mean? What did she want more than anything in the world? Do you think she would've been happy if she had got all the money she wanted?

7. The show had lots of opportunities for the audience to yell out and be part of the story. Did you join in the fun? If so, what did you believe about the show or yourself that made you play full out?

8. If not, why didn't you join in?

9. The show subtly taught that having fun and yelling out and using your physiology (body) in ways that create what we call a 'peak state' is a great way to live life. If you decided not to join in with this, what do you think it will cost you in the future if you continue to be boring and non-fun?

10. If you did play full out in the show and sing along, dance, scream and shout, thanks for being cool, you ROCK! So what other area of your life do you think you could apply this technique to? Perhaps an area where you sometimes become stressed or frustrated.

11. How much more fun and more fulfilled and happy would your life and this situation be if you were to use your body, voice, the focus of your mind, and the questions you ask in similar ways like you did during the show? What difference would it make to your life now and in the future?

12. What would that ultimately look, sound and feel like?

13. Who was the character that you are the most similar to, or someone who you look up to? Why do you want to be like that character? If you were just like them, do you think you would get what you want in life? Why?

1. Critically analyse the production of Cinderella. What was great, what could be better, what decisions did the producers make with regards to what you thought about the show, that may be relevant to the target audience / touring limitations etc.

2. Logistically and artistically, what did you notice about the production that showed a great deal of thought had gone into the sets, costumes, lights, sound, messages of the show, and the whole concept and style of theatre used to engage the audience? What about symbols / themes in the sets, costumes and script?

3. Remembering the story, what was the most important thing you learnt from the way the characters behaved?

4. What were some of the ideas and strategies that the show taught? Do you think the audience understood and gained ownership of some of these ideas? List some new things, like new decisions and choices you want to make, about how to behave and treat people, to ensure you get what you want in life.

5. Discuss the theme of 'Self-worth. How did the show create opportunities for the audience to grow in self-worth? Was the show successful in portraying this idea? What techniques did the show use to help the audience take ownership of this message.

6. The show also taught an easy strategy for eliminating phobia's, called a Phobia Cure. Your teacher has more details on this if you want so if you're interested you could try the technique out for yourself. What's a fear you would like to eliminate that is getting in the way of you achieving something or being confident?

7. The show had lots of opportunities for the audience to yell out and be part of the story. What are some of the reasons the producers decided to make the show like this? Whilst a lot of this stuff is for younger children, did you also enjoy yourself and play like a kid again?

8. If not, why didn't you join in?

9. The show subtly taught that having fun and yelling out and using your physiology (body) in ways that create what we call a 'peak state' is a great way to live life. Whilst the show is generally aimed at younger year levels, do you think you could also learn to have more fun and be happy / let go and not take life so seriously? Do you think that you could have more fun and accomplish more in life if you lived this way too? How specifically?

10. What's an area of your life where you experience a lot of stress, where you could try the techniques that the show taught. Perhaps an area where you sometimes become stressed or frustrated.

11. How much more fun and more fulfilled and happy would your life and this situation be if you were to use your body, voice, the focus of your mind, and the questions you ask in similar ways like you did during the show? What difference would it make to your life now and in the future?

12. What would that ultimately look, sound and feel like?

13. During question time or if you met one of the actors, was there a favourite or someone you aspire to be like? Why do you want to be like that person? If you were just like them, do you think you would get what you want in life? Why?

Remember, if you want, you can write to the actors on the internet! Just go to <http://www.alphashows.com.au> and click on 'KIDS!'
